

Abstract

The present invention relates to a combined preparation comprising the active substance corticoid and a selenium-containing active substance. The combination of active substances leads to a clear reduction of the mortality rate of sepsis patients.